

THE MAP DRAWER / PART II

The Paths Left Unfollowed

PLSAS active field guide / collector snapshot

An atlas of unfinished inquiries.
Some roads were entered. Some answers came. Other questions stayed on the map.

THE PATHS THAT REMAINED

At the turning of the road

When we turned away from the wilds, the map did not turn blank. Questions still stood beside the bridges. Records still waited behind doors. The fox could have named another route before I finished folding the first one.

We had followed many of those paths already. We had asked for explanations, sought corrections, challenged answers and learned things that changed our account. What remained was the work that had not reached a clear ending in the retained record.

I kept these pages so that leaving would not mean forgetting. They show where the questions stood when this collector's snapshot was prepared. A reader can follow a particular trail, or close the drawer and return to the journals. The map is here to serve the story of our choices. It need not become the reader's burden.

The expedition scene is fictional. The entries are drawn from the isolated, source-linked tracker snapshot.

THE DATED SOURCE BOUNDARY

How to read this map

The two parts belong together. Part I preserves the pending or not-active projection, which can include entries with no fixed maturity date. Part II preserves the active projection, including past tracked dates and disputed dispositions. These are workspace tracking groups, not findings of violations.

Calendar refreshed October 26, 2026. The retained broad-mail review ends October 25 at 08:57 Central. A targeted PLSAS and counsel-route mail check on October 26 at 03:57 Central found no new tracker disposition; attachment contents and all communication channels were not reviewed. These are display entries, not findings of legal violations or counts of unique requests. Pending includes rows without a usable maturity date. Active means the tracked date has passed. The July 27 and August 11 correction responses, other denials and review responses remain part of the record; an unresolved source match is not total silence. Private descriptions are replaced with neutral process topics; source text is kept separately.

This part contains 184 display entries. A request can have several components, and abbreviated identifiers can recur. Display entries are not a count of unique requests or proven wrongs.

Each card keeps its reference, opening date, tracked date, status and unfinished question. Short neutral descriptions replace child-private detail. A question on the map records what remained to be clarified; it does not show that a new request has been made.

The technical source ledger and private mapping stay outside the reader's box.

CLOSING THE DRAWER

The map stays here

These entries preserve questions and the state of the retained record. They include routes already attempted, disputed answers and work left unfinished. The title describes the expedition's turning point; it does not declare that every request was unanswered or that every route was never taken.

Exact request identities and tracked dates let an adult find the underlying record. Descriptions are shortened to keep private experiences out of this reading copy. A recorded deadline or label is part of the tracker; it is not a new decision by a court or agency.

The journals can be read without opening this drawer. The remaining work belongs to the adults. The child's life has room to grow beyond the map.

184 entries in this part. Source and editorial details remain in the local companion ledger.
